The four most grievous instances were all in men of ages between twentytwo and forty-eight. Cases of mere tormina consequent upon irritation of the bowels or constipation, and cases of lead-poisoning, I have excluded; not because they have no element of visceral neurosis in them) as indeed they have, but because I desired to study the malady in its purer form. In this way we may hereafter carry our judgment more clearly to secondary or mixed cases. The greater relative frequency of enteralgia in men than of gastralgia may be explained in part by its being more directly allied to gout than is gastralgia, in part by its dependence on the weightier stress of the affairs of men. From my own cases I gather that a family history of gout, in its heavier and wider operations, is characteristic of enteralgics rather than...
