These are determined by setting up the level so that it is higher than any point in the cross-section and noting its height above the stake at the center. This rod reading added to the given center cut d gives the height of the instrument above the roadbed. This is called the H.I. Subtracting the rod reading for any point from the H.I. gives the height of that point above the roadbed. In the case of a fill, which may be illustrated by turning Fig. 42 upside down, the level may be either above or below the roadbed. This modifies the above rule somewhat, but the same principle applies--determine the difference of elevation of each point of the surface of the ground and the roadbed. COMPUTING THE VOLUME. 53. Common Methods. Sometimes an approximate computation of the volume of the earthwork is made from the work of the preliminary survey, so as to get an approximate idea of the amount of earthwork on a route, and therefore its cost. To do this, a more or less approximate measure of each cross-section is taken and then the distance between any two cross-sections is multiplied by the half-sum of the two areas. The sum of all such products gives the total volume. Such a method is mathematically inaccurate, but the approximation in the cross-sectional areas, and some other reasons, will probably introduce still further inaccuracies. These various methods will be described in the order...
