Reviews

An extremely awesome publication with lucid and perfect explanations. It is actually written in basic phrases rather than confusing. You will like how the writer publishes this book.

Excerpt: .transport wanted from the very first--Veterinary Surgeon Cox s remarks on our usual practice--Proposal for purchasing and farming out animals--Proposal for registering horses and yearly payment to owners--Purchasing committees to be sent abroad at an early date. In a former chapter we have treated of the provision in men, in this will be considered another very important requirement, which is the provision of horses and transport animals. This has to be attended to in mobilising an army corps, for Cavalry, Artillery, Engineers, Commissariat and Transport cannot take the field efficiently unless provided with a full complement of horses and transport animals. Their breeding, shape, and action should be in strict conformity with the work for which they are intended; in some cases speed, in others power of draught, coupled with endurance, are the principal requirements. None but sound and robust animals are fitted for the severe work of a campaign, and their age should be such as will secure a fair prospect of their not becoming non-effective during the course of operations. The question of horsing the mounted branches is a very important one; it is one of those measures of preparation which should be thoroughly studied in time of peace. The following table gives the number of horses required for the various arms and services in an army corps, according to the established organisation: --Besides the horses enumerated in the above table, horses and transport animals are required for remount depots, for mounted...
